Containers Held at Shipper's Premises / Loading Locations

Exporters are hereby advised that containers that are to be held under refrigeration waiting loading by the shipper or its contractor/s are the prime responsibility of the shipper. Consequently the shipper or its contractor/s must ensure that the correct power source and socket are available. Whilst the container/s are held on power under the control of the shipper, the shipper has a duty to ensure that on receipt of the container/s that the container/s is placed to power, the machinery is running and is set to the required supply air temperature. During the period the container/s remain on power under the control of the shipper, the shipper undertakes to ensure that the container temperatures are monitored twice daily and that such monitoring is recorded. In the event of any cause of concern immediate contact is to be to the local Cooltainer office or by contacting KN Cooltainer H/O on +64 021 572 467 (24hrs).

Failure to comply with the preceding paragraph will void any claim of whatsoever cause against KN Cooltainer.
